

Armon is no stranger to the entertainment industry, even coming from a small town of South San Francisco, a town in which everyone recognizes when they land in San Francisco SFO airport known for the letters on the hill that read "South San Francisco the Industrial City" in which that's just what it was, a blue-collar town. The best thing you can get close to shining in entertainment was to join the high school band, where Armon was considered one of the top drummers in the school district. He played in the exclusive top band since his freshman year.

While having the passion to do more in the Entertainment Industry, Armon and friends were pioneers to bringing entertainment to the school through talent shows and more. Not long after high school into college, Armon and a friend formed a Latin hip-hop group that toured Mexico in the late 90s to 2001. Once the music ended, Armon was now a dancer not dancing, a singer not singing, an entertainer not entertaining. Armon would soon find an interest in emceeing & hosting and began hosting select events.

Since then Armon has been entertaining and electrifying crowds of every capacity with his energy and golden voice. He has hosted and entertained for the MLB, NBA, NHL, NCAA, NFL, WNBA, as well as hosting events for the Kentucky Derby and Golden Boy Promotions.

In 2005, the NBA would be the first place Armon would take the microphone and soon begin to energize crowds. Through his growing recognition, in 2010 he would be invited to host and be the first On-Court Emcee for the PAC-12 Men and Women's Western Conference Basketball Tournaments, the PAC-12 would also utilize him to host for their Women's Gymnastics Championships. In 2014, he would get national recognition becoming the first Field Host and Emcee for the Kentucky Derby and Kentucky Oaks at Churchill Downs hosting to more than 160K people each year since then.

When Armon isn't on a field or on a court, he's acting in T.V. commercials, and Film also lending his voice for VO's (voiceovers) for brands such as AT&T, VISA, Golden1, Carl's Jr., and Money Mutual just to name a few.
